

In Loving Memory of Isabelle

You came into our lives when we saw your hilarious picture on the SPCA website. We fell in love with you instantly. And, even though it took you and Abby 6 months and a lot of arguing, you became the best of friends. You slept together, you would find scents together, you would eat together and guard the house together.

You had the most adorable run, before your knees gave out. But, you refused to let that stop you from going on short walks or "running" out the door. You had so much courage and strength. We loved the way your tongue would poke out and how your face would get all squished up when you slept. Your snore made us so sleepy, and made it so hard to get up in the morning.

You were so sweet, and everyone who met you fell in love with you, and all dogs were your friends. We loved how you would wander at the dog park, and would accidentally attach yourself to other groups. We think you found it as funny as we did.

You were so cheeky. You loved to dig in the couch and bed even though you knew you shouldn't, and the time we found you chewing on daddy's Mego will be a memory to cherish always. You had one rule, and that was that if it's in your mouth it's yours. This included toys, treats, and that random piece of an animal that you found in the park that one time. You fought hard for that one! And you tested us time and again with your squee. That sound would wake anyone out of a dead sleep!

You were so cuddly. No matter where mom sat, you had to lie right up against her body. This made daddy jealous, but it always made mom secretly happy. Even if you did end up taking up all the space on the couch, and she'd have to shift you to the side a bunch of times. You always cuddled up close in the bed. You would spoon us, and you would sleep with your head on our pillows cuddled up against our sides. You never did learn to stay away from the edge of the bed, but you were always so cheery when you fell out. You just wanted to be picked up and put back in the middle.

You were so content every day, and that made us happy. You loved with your whole heart, and you stole ours in return. We love you, and cherish the time that we were a part of your life. We will miss you always, and you truly are our sweet baby angel. We hope you're running around in the big dog park, free of pain and making tons of friends and finding lots of smells to enjoy.
